THIS SUNDAY

TORONTO HONORS GHETTO FIGHTERS

Official representatives of the people of Ontario will join with the Jewish community this Sunday, April 21st in Toronto in a mass observance of the 20th Anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising.

The Ghetto Uprising event, to be held in Beth Tzedec Sanctuary at 2 o'clock this Sunday afternoon, will honour the memory of six million Jewish martys to Nazism and at the same time will serve as a demonstration of community concern about the rise of anti-Semitism across the world today.

Underscoring the demonstration aspect of the event will be the principal address by Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, director of the International Affairs Department of World Jewish Congress. Speaking in Yiddish will be Mordechai W. Bernstein, of New York, a noted historian and journalist.

The significance of the occasion to non-Jews as well as Jews will be marked by the attendance of Lieutenant-governor Keiller Mackay and the presence of Hon. John P. Robarts, Prime Minister of Ontario, who will deliver a message on behalf of the people of Ontario.

The Canadian Jewish Congress, under whose auspices the observances will take place in communities across Canada, has issued a call to the entire Jewish community to turn out in record numbers for the event.

A feature of this year's observance in Toronto is the Proclamation of Warsaw Ghetto Day Observance by the Metropolitan Toronto Exeutive Committee for Sunday, April 21—a day which will be marked by Jewish communities across the world.

Also due to attend are: Metropolitan Chairman William Allen, Reeve Jack Mauld of York Township and Reeve Edwin J. Pivnick of Forest Hill Village.

The program of the event at the Beth Tzedec Synagogue will include the symbolic lighting of six memorial candles for the millions of martyrs, by pupils of Toronto Jewish schools. Cantor Henry Wahrman, of Beth Sholom Synagogue, will chant the Yiskor prayers; the Beth Tzedec Choir, directed by Gordon Kushner, will be heard in songs of the Partisans and the Ghetto. A feature of the program will be a dramatic recitation in Yiddish by noted CBC actor-personality Paul Kligman of a poem dedicated to the uprising.

The chairman of the gathering will be Meyer W. Gasner, Chairman of the Canadian Jewish Congress, Central Region.

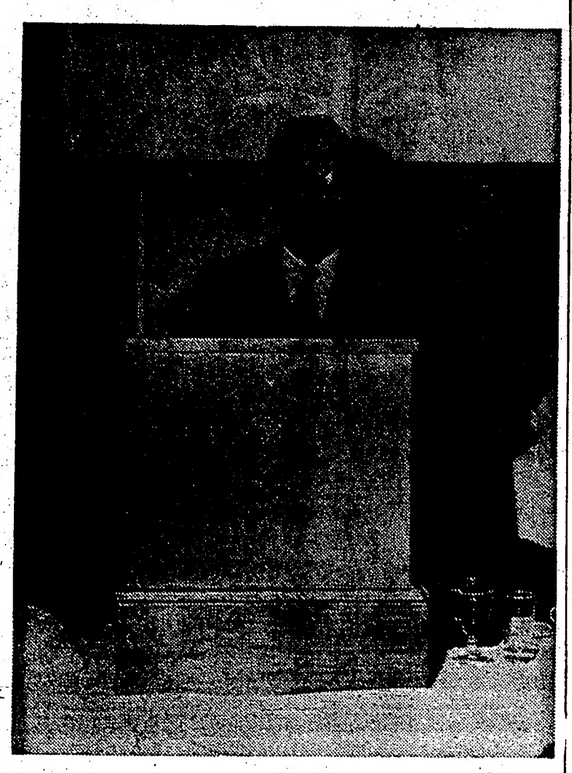
NASSER PREPARING FOR ATTACK



WARNS ABOUT DANGER: General Moshe Dayan photographed in Toronto during his last visit here. Sinai hero now tells Israelis they must rely upon themselves.

• Commentary •

By M. J. Nurenberger

who failed?

Several weeks ago, when the World Zionist Council in Jerusalem observed the anniversary of the Ghetto Revolt, Dr. Nahum Goldmann made a surprising statement. In his address, the president of the World Jewish Congress, while rejecting the theory that Jews under the Nazis lacked courage to fight, admitted that Jews in the free world, especially those in America, had failed.

* * * *

I remember Dr. Nahum Goldmann from several occasions during World War II — in Washington, in New York and at the well-publicized meeting of the World Jewish Congress in Atlantic City. It is remarkable . . . a leader who had publicly stated that "European Jewry is doomed", now blames the average Jew in North America for having failed.

The average Jew was confused during the war years. There was a group active in Jewish life which, at the time and under the circumstances — and not twenty years too late — advocated this kind of action that Goldmann now sees as salvation. But then, when the destiny of millions of Jews was on the scale, Dr. Goldmann and other official leaders did not contribute to any elucidation of the problem so far as the man on the street was concerned. However, this group here, on the North American continent, and in Israel, dramatized the tragic situation and prescribed the exact formula which Goldmann now suggests post mortem. Do I conclude that Dr. Goldmann is wrong when he tackles anew the problem of what could have been done in the early forties? By no means.

To our deep regret, an investigation into the reasons for our failure during World War II is of vital necessity. The Jewish horizon is obstructed by dark clouds. And if we do not learn from the failures of the immediate past, how can we secure the immediate future?

* * * *

Toronto Jews will commemorate this Sunday the twentieth anniversary of the Ghetto Revolt. Jews the world over will share with them the observance of this historic event. At this time, I do not hesitate to pose the question: is not a profound evaluation of our role in the Ghetto years in order?

Jewish history in the Diaspora is, regretfully, too rich in commemorations and occasions for reciting the Kaddish and El Mole Rachmim. For once let's change the tradition — fearlessly, undaunted. Let us analyze our failures during World War II, when a leader of Dr. Goldmann's calibre, who was directly involved in Jewish politics at the time, tells us that we have failed. Let us reach the core of the matter. For it is imperative to find out who failed — and WHAT ATTITUDE failed — so that history does not repeat itself.

While we honor the Ghetto fighters, we should remember that neither memorials for the heroes of the battle, nor glorification of the martyrs, will revive a single Jew. Of course, Kaddish is holy. However, in the words of this hallowed prayer, it means the sanctification of God's name. And, in the ancient words, the dead cannot praise the Lord; it is up to the living. Thus the living should prepare for the battle - to remain alive.

Rabbis Denounce Newspaper Series

(By CJN Staff Writer)

A series of articles published this week by the Toronto Telegram was criticized from the pulpit by a number of rabbis. The author of the series, a former rabbi and a former staff member of the Toronto office of the State of Israel Bonds organization, was accused by these rabbis of "misleading the reading public" on the main issues now confronting the state of Israel.

The author, Reuben Slonim, a member of the editorial staff of the newspaper, visited Israel this month and commenced a report on "Israel in its 15th year". Mr. Slonim was introduced to the readers of his series as "an editorial writer, Middle East expert" and as a "Canadian of Jewish descent". Mr. Slonim last year also criticized Israel for conducting the Eichmann trial in Jerusalem.

COMMUNITY SHOCKED

The first three articles of the series, termed "biased" by local rabbis in their Passover sermons, are presenting Israel as a country where Christians do not enjoy full freedom of religion. Leading members of the Jewish community expressed their shock that the Telegram, known for its fair reporting of Israeli affairs, had published such "prejudiced commentaries" on one of the most delicate problems in Israel: the relations between the Jewish majority and non-Jewish minorities.

Mr. Slonim speaking of so-called "Christian Jews" says, "their plight is a serious challenge of the arrested development of freedom of conscience in the Jewish state". It was pointed out to this reporter that Israel's leading Christian clergyman, Archbishop George Hakim, prelate of the Greek Catholic church in Israel, on several occasions stressed for the record the full freedom and equality enjoyed by Christians in the Jewish state. Also, leading Protestant clergymen and Catholic priests enthusiastically praised the climate of religious freedom in Israel.

"CATHOLIC JEW"

In one of his articles, Mr. Slonim discusses the case of Brother Daniel, a Catholic monk of Jewish descent. Mr. Slonim quotes Brother Daniel as saying:

". . . When I came to Israel and discovered I am not a member of my people because I believe in Jesus Christ, I felt this to be an injustice not only against me but against human freedom."

REJECT RACIALISM

Brother Daniel demanded from the Israeli government to be naturalized as a Jew. Israel's supreme court rejected his demand, because "I believe in Jesus Christ". Mr. Slonim, a former Toronto rabbi, ignores the essential fact that a Jew who embraces Jesus Christ and becomes a Catholic monk, becomes a Catholic and thus ceases to be a Jew. In the Daniel case, the Israeli Supreme Court rejected the Nazi theory of a Jewish race. Father Daniel was naturalized as a Christian and the government of Israel refused to register him as a Jew, and he became an Israeli citizen of the Catholic faith.

According to the rabbis who sharply denounced Mr. Slonim's attacks against Israel, these and similar statements and also the article "Arabs are denied rights in Israel" constitute a slander against the Jewish state. The Jewish community, we were told, expects an editorial statement from the Telegram in which this newspaper would make clear its position on this unwarranted misrepresentation of Israel's policy of religious freedom.

Leader Reports

TORONTO UJA HITS 2 MILLION MARK

The 1963 United Jewish Appeal of Toronto campaign has reached the $2,000,000 mark, according to a statement made this week by Ray D. Wolfe, campaign chairman.

The 1963 campaign, he reported, is ahead of 1962 on a card-for-card basis. "If we do not falter now," he stated, "the Toronto Jewish community has an opportunity to show that it is prepared to meet its obligations, both in Toronto and overseas. It becomes increasingly more vital for chairmen and workers to canvass outstanding cards and for contributors who have not yet made their gifts to follow the high standards already set."

The statement continued, "Our increased giving may be a matter of survival to the people of Israel, who are threatened as never before. In the long years of struggle to establish Israel, and in the conflicts since 1948 the Jewish State has been tried and tested in many cases, but the threat was never so clear or the danger so grave as it is today."

Mr. Wolfe said he had been informed by United Hias Service, the world-wide immigration agency, that more than 200,000 Jewish men, women and children fled their homelands last year, with most going to Israel. "The current exodus of Jewish persons from danger zones in many parts of the world demonstrates that the story of our people's survival through migration is as alive today as it was in Biblical times," he asserted.

The statement also stressed that community services in Toronto which are supported by the United Jewish Welfare Fund with United Jewish Appeal proceeds "may be adversely affected if we do not raise enough to meet minimum requirements."

"Our Jewish community is expanding rapidly," he declared, "and we must provide the educational, recreational, social, cultural and welfare facilities and programs that will insure healty growth. We cannot be a dynamic community if our giving remains static."

State Dept.

PREFERS GERMAN ROCKETS TO RUSS

NEW YORK (CJN)—The hiring of foreign scientists to develop armaments in Egypt is not considered wrong by world powers and certainly not by the State Department, and this applies also to Germans.

The basis of Congressional protests was that the scientists in Egypt were Germans preparing for a continuation of Hitler's war against the Jews, but the State Department has refused to accept the view.

Under-Secretary of State Averell Harriman's letter to Rep. Leonard Farbstein asserted that it is better the scientists should be Germans than Russians.

14 CANADIANS HONORED BY N. Y. YESHIVA UNIVERSITY

NEW YORK, (CJN). — Fourteen residents of Canada will be honored at the annual Ambassador Reception of Yeshiva University to be held on Wednesday, April 24, at 4 p.m., at the Park Lane Hotel in New York City.

They are part of a group of national business and community leaders who will be presented with Medallions of Honor for "outstanding service to higher education."

Receiving the awards will be: J. A. Bessner, 360 Kensington Ave., Westmoutn, Montreal; John D. Fienberg, 99 Avenue Road, Toronto; Meyer W. Gasner, 32 Strathern Road, Toronto; Asher Gerstenfeld, 4885 Queen Mary Road, Montreal; Max Hoffman, 41 Gore Street, Hamilton, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob M. Lowy, 309 Dominion Square Building, Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Leon Petegorsky, 203 Chapel St., Ottawa; Theodore Richman, 147 Old Forest Hill Road, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Solomon, 53-67 Portland Street, Dortmouth, Nova Scotia; Joseph Tanenbaum, 45 Parliament Street, Toronto; and Joseph Wolinsky, 87 Princess Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

New York City Comptroller Abraham D. Beame is chairman of the reception. The Honorable Herbert H. Lehman, former United States Senator and Governor of the State of New York, is Honorary Chairman of the Council of Ambassadors.

OTTAWA STILL HAS FOUR JEWISH M. P'S

Ottawa. — The Canadian General Election, of April 8th has left unchanged the number of Jewish M.P.s which remains at four. The only change is the election of the Liberal, Mr. Marvin Gelber, of York-South, who defeated Mr. David Lewis, Deputy Leader of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Herbert A. Gray (Liberal) was re-elected in Essex-West. Mr. Milton Klein, Q.C. (also Liberal) was elected in Montreal, succeeding the late Mr. Leon Crestohl, who died two weeks before the elections. In Winnipeg, Mr. David Orlikow (New Democratic) was re-elected.

GENERAL DAYAN WARNS ISRAELIS

TEL AVIV, (CJN).—Maj. Gen. Moshe Dayan said this week that no one would stop the United Arab Republic from developing nuclear weapons, so Israel's armaments industry dare not lag. He added that Cairo might produce atomic warheads for her surface-to-surface rockets within the next decade.

General Dayan, who took the Sinai Peninsula from the Egyptians in 1956, is now Minister of Agriculture in the Government of Premier David Ben-Gurion. The general set forth his views in an article under his name in the newspaper Maariv.

Israel is building a thermal reactor in the Negev that will produce 24,000 kilowatts of electrical energy. It has also produced some "meteorological" rockets. Both projects are shrouded in secrecy, and the station is out of bounds to foreign visitors. But the Israelis have said it will be open to trainees from abroad when it is completed.

1st Missile Fired in 1961

Nothing has been disclosed here about the rocket-development program since the first missile was fired in 1961. Both projects are under the direction of the Ministry of Defense.

General Dayan wrote that it was fairly certain President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic wanted to develop nuclear weapons. He noted that the Egyptian army was being equipped with rockets costing hundreds of thousands of dollars each.

"No army has ever produced them only to carry conventional warheads," he said. Perhaps, he said, Nasser has special considerations for building such expensive missiles just to deliver "conventional explosive to the cities and airfields of Israel," but, he added, "I fear it is likely that Nasser plans to produce warheads."

Two Egyptian Aims Seen

That, General Dayan said, would serve President Nasser's dual aspirations of wiping out Israel and establishing an Arab bloc from the Atlantic to the Indian Ocean. Even the most primitive nuclear warheads, the Israeli official said, would be sufficient to enable President Nasser to impose "his terror" on the countries of the Mideast.

Even if the Egyptians did not qualify for membership in the "nuclear club" they would "gain admission to the anteroom" and become a force to be reckoned with, General Dayan said.

The general cautioned Israelis against expecting world opinion to be aroused by the disclosure that President Nasser hired foreign experts to develop nuclear weapons. Most advanced countries are preparing to equip their armies with nuclear arms, he said, and hiring foreign scientists to develop them is not considered wrong.

No Drastic Action Expected

The Israeli minister said he did not believe that the nuclear powers would supply President Nasser with atomic weapons, but that neither would they use drastic measures to prevent him from developing his own. Only combined pressure by East and West could be effective, and that was unlikely, General Dayan said.

He supported the Israeli campaign against Dr. Wolfgang Pilz and the German rocket team in Egypt, and against European concerns aiding the United Arab Republic's armaments program.

But he warned that even if pressure should be successful and those connections severed it would only disrupt Cairo's program, not halt it. Other foreign experts and companies would be engaged, General Dayan declared.

"So in the era of rockets with conventional and unconventional warheads," the Israeli said, President Nasser would be detered from starting a war "primarily by the might" of Israeli's defense forces. "We must diligently develop those weapons so that we don't lag," he said.

TSUR WILL ADDRESS TORONTO COMMUNITY

The Honourable JACOB TSUR, former Israeli Ambassador to France, now Chairman, Board of Directors, Jewish National Fund, will be the guest speaker of the 15th Yom Ha'atzmaut celebration of Israel's Independence which will take place in the Beth Tzedec Synagogue on April 28.

After the establishment of the State of Israel, Tsur was called upon to serve as one of its first diplomats and was the first Israeli envoy in Latin America.

Mr. Tsur is best remembered as Ambassador to France from 1953-1959, for it was during his tenure of office that close relationships were cemented between France and Israel. In 1959 he was awarded by the French Government the Order of Grand Officer, Legion d'Honneur.

● "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying", outstanding musical comedy playing at O'Keefe Center through Saturday, April 20th, now enters its second week.

● "How to Succeed...." walked away with some of the years most coveted prizes and critical huzzahs. Prime among them was the Pulitzer Prize for the Best Play of 1962, making it only the fourth musical so honored in the 44 years of annual awards, the highest in American literature. It has been based by Abe Burrows, Jack Weinstock and Willie Gilbert on the book of the same name by Shepherd Mead, with Burrows doubling as director. Music and lyrics are by Frank Loesser, composer of "Where's Charley?", "The Most Happy Fella," "Guys and Dolls" and a host of popular songs. Other contributors include Bob Fosse, musical staging; Hugh Lambert, choreography; Robert Randolph, scenery and lighting; Robert Fletcher, costumes; Fred Werner, musical direction; Robert Ginzler, orchestrations.

KEEP SMILING

TOTALLY DESTROYED

A poor man, whose house had burned down, trudged from town to town collecting alms with which to rebuild his home.

"Have you written proof that your house was burned down?" asked someone.

"Oh, the proof!" wailed the poor man. "That too, nebikh, was destroyed in the big fire!"

TRUTH WILL OUT

A poor Jewish farmer called on his more affluent neighbor to borrow his donkey.

"I'm sorry," said the well-to-do farmer, "but my donkey is over in the pasture now."

All at once the hee-haw of a donkey was heard coming from the stable.

"What a silly excuse to give me-" said the poor farmer angrily. "Why, your donkey has just brayed in its stall!"

The well-to-do farmer was offended.

"Whom would you rather believe," he asked with dignity, "the braying donkey or me?"

EPHRAIM AUERBACH world famous Yiddish poet will speak tonight at Toronto's Labor Zionist Centre.

AUERBACH IN TORONTO

Honored By Labor Zionists

An Oneg Shabbat in honor of the seventieth birthday of Ephraim Auerbach takes place this evening, Friday, April 19th, 8:30 p.m., at the Labor Zionist Center, 14 Viewmount Avenue.

Ephraim Auerbach is a well known Yiddish poet and journalist. For many years he has been a columnist of the Day-Morning Journal. Also he has published a number of volumes of poetry.

A long-time Labor Zionist, Auerbach lived for several years in Palestine. He served in the Jewish Legion during World War I under Trumpeldor. Afterwards he settled in the United States, where he made a name for himself among a group of poets known as "die Yinge". His book of poems, 'Caravanen", was the first volume of Yiddish poetry devoted to Eretz Yisrael.

A novel about the second Aliyah was published in Hebrew, the language into which some of his works were translated and praised by the critique in Israel.

Auerbach plans to settle in Israel in November.

Those honoring Auerbach tonight include the Histadrut, Achdut Avoda, Independent Arbeter Ring, the Farband Labor Zionist Order. His latest book, "Vach is Der Step", will be on display at the Labor Zionist Center.

Ed Sullivan Here

Ed Sullivan, who will broadcast his TV show from O'Keefe Centre April 28, will be the special guest at an Advance Gifts cocktail reception Friday, April 26 at 3 p.m., sponsored by the United Jewish Appeal of Toronto.

Ray D. Wolfe, campaign chairman, announced that the event will be held in the Confederation Room of the Royal York Hotel. Chairmen and workers in the 1963 drive also have been invited.

"Mr. Sullivan is well-known for his support of various philanthropic causes," Mr. Wolfe stated, "He is especially familiar with the work of the United Jewish Appeal because of his recent visit to Israel, where he viewed various aspects of immigration and resettlement. We are pleased that he accepted our invitation to appear and speak briefly at this reception."

Mr. Sullivan will go directly to the UJA event after his arrival at Toronto Airport, his secretary reported, making it his first appearance in Toronto during his weekend stay here.

Women Mobilize For U. J. A. Drive Finale

Final clean-up has begun of all cards in the Women's Division, 1963 United Jewish Appeal of Toronto, it was reported this week by Mrs. John R. Devor, chairman.

"Efforts are being made to conclude the entire UJA campaign," Mrs. Devor stated, "and the Women's Division is co-operating by accelerating its canvassing in all phases. Almost every segment of our drive is obtaining increased contributions, and we have hopes of raising much more money than we did last year."

Mrs. Devor urged all workers to canvass outstanding cards as soon as possible, and in any case before the end of April.

The campaign leadership includes: Mrs. Mark A. Levy, immediate past chairman, and the Mesdames Melvin Allan, Carl C. Cole, Mildred C. Cole, Mildred Sobol and Max Tanenbaum, liaison to the chairman.

Mrs. Harry Hershoran and Mrs. Ben Okun, co-chairmen of Crown Gifts, reported that only a few pledges are still unsolicited in this category. Mrs. Samuel Norris, Advance Gifts chairman, said cards are being returned "at a very satisfactory pace."

Special Gifts, which was the last group to open its campaign, is under the chairmanship of Mrs. John Van Der Hout and Mrs. David Wodlinger, with Mrs. Albert Allison serving as vice-chairman. There are still a substantial number of cards to be returned.

General Canvass, which held its second "Harvest of Cards" last week at Holy Blossom Temple, is being led by Mrs. Morris Vigoda as chairman and Mrs. Henry Mulstein, vice-chairman.

"Operation Telethon" has less than 500 cards still to be completed out of a total of 7,500, according to Mrs. Wolfe Goldberg, chairman.

The Treasury Gifts campaign, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Percy Dolgoff, is moving ahead. The Synagogue Liaison effort, with Mrs. Samuel Donnenfield and Mrs. Alvin B. Rosenberg serving as co-chairmen, is still accepting invitations from Sisterhoods for speakers or programs on the UJA.

700,000 POUNDS FOR ISRAEL PROJECTS

LONDON — Sir Isaac Wolfson, British philanthropist, disclosed here that the Wolfson family had made a contribution of more than 700,000 pounds for projects in Israel.

TORONTO BENEFITS FROM UJA: Browsing among the stacks of the Jewish Public Library, a beneficiary of the United Jewish Appeal of Toronto, can be a pleasant and rewarding experience for children. The Library, located at 22 Glen Park Avenue, has a capacity of 15,000 volumes and is a treasure house of the largest collection of Judaica in Toronto covering every phase of Jewish life in English, Yiddish and Hebrew. Periodicals from around the world in three languages are available in the Library's reading room, and the reference department attracts rabbis, principals, teachers, sociologists, leaders of study groups and students up to university level who are searching for material.

letters to the editor

GELBER AND LEWIS

While congratulating Marvin Gelber on his election to the House of Commons for the riding of York South (and we feel certain he will represent the voters of that constituency with vigor and dignity), we express regret that David Lewis, a no less able representative, was defeated. It was truly one of the minor tragic dilemmas of the elections in the Metro area both in 1962 and now.

Able, competent and with well-merited friendships and influence in the Jewish community and elsewhere, both should not have been pitted against each other in a battle a l'outrance which inevitably had to mean the defeat of one.

This will mean an appalling waste of talent and parliamentary skill for Mr. Lewis, just as it was for Mr. Gelber in the past. We hope some way can be found in the future which will enable the citizens of different sections of Metropolitan Toronto to have both these estimable men representing them in Parliament — a much more profitable arrangement for the country at large than the head-on collision that has taken place between these two who, incidentally, are good friends socially, if not politically.

Toronto. H. MORDECAI.

TOO CLEVER

THE "IZVESTIA" AND THE JEWS

If any further proof was required for the deteriorating position of the Jewish minority in Russia and the Kremlin's sensitivity to its bad press abroad this has now been supplied most conclusively by a series of letters from readers that appeared in "Izvestia", the official organ of the Soviet government.

From the hundreds of letters which it claims to have received, all dealing with the exchange of correspondence between Bertrand Russell and the Soviet Premier, the paper on a recent Saturday published four. All are from Jews and all protest against Lord Russell's "unjust accusations". They come from places as far apart as Leningrad and Lvov (Lemberg), so as to underline the fact that "excellent" treatment is accorded to Jews in all parts of the U.S.S.R.

The first letter, from L. Rozman, a shop-steward in Lvov, refutes Russell's "oblique accusation that anti-Semitism is officially encouraged in Russia." "For three years in succession," Rozman writes, "my candidature has been put up by all my comrades in the factory and in 1963 I was elected chairman of the trade union organization." "Would this be possible," he asks, "had there been anti-Semitism about?" "Could I, a Jew, have been unanimously elected?'

The second letter, under the suggestive title of "The Happiness of My Children", is from a Jewish driver named Boruchovitch, of Sverdlovsk. "In Tsarist Russia," he writes, "my father had a hard life. He could not have his children properly educated. But the life of my children has been very different. My eldest daughter, after graduation from an Institute of Languages, is now a teacher in English, with a free command of your native tongue, Mr. Russell.

"My second daughter is qualifying as a doctor, and my son, who is also at university, intends to become a military specialist."

The same theme is the subject of the third letter from G. Kuperman, a Jewish old-age pensioner from Orenburg. He, too, compares the "happy days" under the present regime with those under the Tsar, telling Lord Russell of the "pogroms organized by the Black Hundreds in Kishinev, the loathsome anti-Jewish organizations and, by contrast, the security enjoyed by Jews today."

But it is the fourth letter that is meant to express best what the Kremlin wants its Jews to say. Published under the title "We Need No Other" —meaning, of course, no other regime —a Jewish factory worker, S. Krestin, of Leningrad, tells Lord Russell how "puzzled" he is that so eminent a philosopher, who must have good opportunities for establishing the truth and "certainly follows the Russian press," could make such a grave error in his judgment of Soviet society. "You say," he writes, "you are deeply disturbed by the death sentences passed on Jews in the Soviet Union. Dear philosopher, you are deeply mistaken."

He invites Lord Russell to come to Russia, meet "our prominent people and see for yourself." "Try to ask Soviet Jews," he says, "whether they would like a new regime. Such a question," he warns, "would insult everybody. All of us, Russians, Jews, Latvians and Georgians, are first and foremost Soviet people, patriots of our Socialist fatherland."

Of course, as in the past, the Soviet newspaper adroitly avoids the essence of the debate.

ONLY IN AMERICA

by HARRY GOLDEN

The American Compulsion

Americans are always well-informed: or let's say they have a compulsion to appear well-informed. Ask a fellow how he likes his little foreign car and he will answer: "By golly, you ought to buy one of these. I get 143 miles to the gallon and the car isn't as small as it looks. Why last summer, I took the wife, the wife's mother, the three kids and the maid out to see the Grand Canyon in absolute comfort." He has neglected, of course, to tell you the car rarely starts, that it wears out the generator and the generator brushes, which necessitates a new battery every 800 miles, but no matter, he has appeared well-informed and positive.

Or ask a matron about a cleaning service and without a second's hesitation she will reply hers is the most reasonable in the entire country. The cleaning fellows are so nice! They even stand in the bathtub to clean the tiles. Imagine that. She doesn't think it important that you know this service is completely unreliable, that they never show up on time and if they show up at all, it is late in the afternoon when she's invited 12 of the girls in for a little mah jong. If she mentioned this, she would mean she didn't know a good cleaning service when she sees one, and thus appear ill-informed. She is really being kind since she wants to spare you the effort of searching through the yellow pages.

No one has any hesitation in recommending a lawyer who can't manage a mortgage-closing to a fellow facing a capital charge, or shipping off their best friend to a mechanic who doesn't know the difference between the fuel line and the exhaust pipe, or recommending the purchase of a house they know leaks and is haunted besides.

Americans dispense information graciously, promptly, and generously. That it happens to be wrong information shouldn't obscure their motive which is pure.

Every city or town you visit is the world's best; every doctor you ask about is the best doctor and every dentist the most reasonable. Invariably the doctor recommended spends the whole consultation period declaiming on the evils of Medicare and then ships you off to a specialist to have the splinter from your finger removed and the dentist shoots a whole set of expensive X rays before filling the wrong tooth.

No one has the raw guts to say, "I don't know a responsible baby-sitter," or "I can't recommend you to my accountant because if his adding machine breaks he's helpless."

The one thing people won't pass out freely is an introduction to their boss when you're unemployed. They will tell you you wouldn't want to work where they work, you wouldn't like the people or the salary, but they fortunately happen to know of a dandy employment agency and they will give it a buzz on your behalf.

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

Devotion And Decorum

The rapturous abandon displayed by David as he danced before the Ark of God earned him the sharp rebuke of his wife Michal. Reared amid the traditional decorum of the kingly house, this daughter of Saul expected of David behaviour consonant with the royal dignity. If he desired to show respect to the Ark of God, need he disport himself with such unbecoming antics in the sight of the common people?

David's retort is simple and illuminating. His dancing and leaping was 'before the Lord"; and before the Lord humility, self-abasement and disregard of the norms of conventional behaviour in no way lessen a man's stature.

Our sympathies are entirely with David, with his humble recognition that God is the source whence all royal power and dignity stem. We can understand how his devout heart burst with uncontrolled joy at the return, after so long an absence, of the sacred Ark, symbol of God's indwelling Presence amid the people of Israel.

Nevertheless, in the institutional home of Jewish prayer, the Synagogue, it is the spirit of Michal's stricture that prevails. "Know before whom you stand" is the constant refrain of Jewish moralists in their demand for a reverential attitude in the House of God.

That refrain has been taken up in all seriousness by the modern worshipper who expects to find there a divine service that shall be dignified, reverent and uplifting.

To that end, impressive edifices are reared to the greater glory of God, and services arranged that will impress the worshipper with the beauty of holiness. But alas, how often have these external evidences of the faith, so laudably executed, proved to be empty, if magnificent shells; the services cold and mechanical, to which the worshippers come with frigid hearts, and depart with souls untouched?

And how often do we come upon a humble, perhaps even ugly little "Shool," that yet pulsates with religious warmth and the spirit of God can be palpably felt within it? Is it not significant that when Franz Rosenzweig was on the verge of accepting Christianity, it was not the magnificent "Temples' of Germany or their elaborate services that called him back to Judaism, but the chance experience of a Yom Kippur spent in a humble little Polish 'Shtiebel?"

We must come to the conclusion that it is not the place that confers spiritually on man, but man who, by his spirit and devotion, invests the place with holiness. The mistake that many sanctuary-builders make is that by an "impressive" building, an ornate service, they will "lure" the Jew to the Synagogue. But you cannot preserve traditional Judaism by a superficial spirituality; by a pageantry type of religion. You may attract a Jew once or twice by spectacular means, but unless the heart is engaged and the spirit is attuned, it will bring no lasting results. The tragedy of so many of our sanctuaries is the inability to understand the fundamental fact. There are too many of us who expect some power from without —a miraculous revelation from above, an inspiring word from the pulpit, a heavenly piece of devotional music, to inspire him. But it is warm hearted Jews who enthuse a synagogue with the spirit of devotion. If religion is to be a vital and rewarding experience, every man must try himself to reach out to God—who is not impressed as man is impressed, but looks straight to the heart and soul of man, in all the privacy and intimacy of the personal encounter.

JEW FACES GERMAN (3)

by M. J. Nurenberger

Strauss and Von Hassel

The man facing me is somewhat plump, taller than he appears on photographs, early middle-aged but impish-looking, with curly blond hair tinged with gray.

He is Franz Josef Strauss, Bavarian-born statesman, till recently Federal Minister of Defense. Nothing in him suggests the traditional or imaginary German military man. His is a friendly, cordial expression. His perpetual cigar rather reminds one more of Churchill than the image of the Prussian army man. He seems to possess all the lust for life of a Bavarian peasant without the small-town southern German parochialism. However, one can be fooled easily by the chubby, infantile visage which conceals the cunning and cleverness of a master politician.

I met Strauss at his office in the Bundestag several weeks after his sensational resignation following the Spiegel Affair.

Many have tried to discourage me when I talked of meeting him. Since I do not accept always cliche pictures of men in public life, the more criticism of Strauss I heard, the more intrigued I was by my anticipated interview.

A few days before the meeting, I was received at the offices of the Bundeswehr, the new Federal German army which is linked with NATO.

My visit with the Bundeswehr people was, in a certain sense, a preparation, a rehearsal for the Strauss interview. For, if Strauss should be judged by past performances and if his role in the new Germany should be evaluated objectively, one only can establish his part by his creation, which is the present Bundeswehr. Moreover, within the last few years Franz Josef Strauss has been one of the most powerful men in Germany. He was involved directly not only in establishing the new army but also in the complex, partly secretive dealings with the State of Israel.

It is too soon to mention the role of Franz Josef Strauss in the more than cordial relations prevailing between the Israeli army and the Bundeswehr. Officially we know only of the Uzi's — the Israeli manufactured sub-machine guns used by the armed forces. But there are other items and other areas of contact. And they reach outside the border, to the left bank of the Rhine, to France, as De Gaulle's France is militarily very much involved with the Bundeswehr. Furthermore, to assert that there is an entente cordiale, on the one hand, between the NATO armies on both sides of the Rhine and the defense forces of Israel on the other, is an understatement. No one seems to talk about it, but everybody apparently knows it.

Another fact should be specified when one discusses Franz Josef Strauss. I discovered Jewish officers in the Bundeswehr although they—these Jews—are reluctant to talk about it. It probably is too early to admit that Jews now are serving in the West Germany army. No one discusses it despite the fact that, according to best informed sources in Bonn, the German army today is more democratic and more liberal in spirit than any other force in German public life. What was the most reactionary and most fascist circle in Germany till 1945 is today, according to foreign observers, the least nationalistic and least chauvenistic: the officers' corps and the ordinary soldier in the Bundeswehr.

Another paradox: this new German Federal army is the creation of Franz Josef Strauss, who has been decried by many as "reactionary".

I studied this problem more intensely than other aspects of present-day German life. And it is interesting to note that, under the leadership of Strauss, the Bundeswehr instituted a democratic equation of the new German soldier, including education against racialism and anti-Semitism. For instance, during his tenure as Minister of Defense, Mr. Strauss published a book called, "Kriegsbriefe Gefallener Deutscher Juden". This book, in a deluxe edition with a nine-page preface by Strauss himself, was widely distributed in Germany. These letters of Jews who served in the German Army during World War I constitute perhaps one of the most important contributions to the re-education of the German people.

When I conversed with Strauss, he reiterated his conviction why such re-education of the armed forces is so important. In his opinion, "anti-Semitism in the Hitler-era was imposed upon us Germans from above while in eastern Europe it comes from below. This is why I believe that education against anti-Semitism may have more chance of succeeding in Germany than in other countries farther to the east where Jew-hatred has been more 'traditional' for Hitler and still remains so to this day."

Strauss speaks candidly, openly, without diplomatic niceties. He does not try to defend in any way what he himself terms "the monstrous character of the extermination of Jews, and genocide, and the magnitude of the criminal fury let loose" during the Hitler years. In his book, which he published for the German soldiers while serving as the German Minister of Defense, he states that the German government policy, in its cruelty towards Jews, "often exceeds the power of human imagination and therefore frequently fails to provoke compassion."

Strauss insists that Hitler's policy to exterminate the Jews was not the end of his (Hitler's) diabolic plans. As a German, he warns the Germans against elusions about Hitler. Had the Nazis won the war, Strauss told his compatriots, Hitler would not have limited his policy of extermination to Jews. There were other groups and countries on his agenda — "after victory".

This is Strauss' way of bringing home to the Germans the facts of life about Hitler and why they have no cause to regret the Nazi defeat.

My interview with Strauss was one of the longest and most interesting during my stay in Germany. Strauss was just as sincere and open-hearted about present relations between Israel and Germany as about the past. When I told him one of the foremost leaders of his country had assured me that official diplomatic relations between Israel and Germany would be established during 1963, he puffed at his cigar and grimaced: . . .

Oh, he, he's a diplomat. . . . Don't bank on it. . . . I don't believe it.

The problem of the relationship between Israel and Germany is a delicate one. In 1953, following the reparations deal, the Israelis considered it premature. Public opinion there was not ready for it. Now the situation has changed. The Germans fear to antagonize the Arabs. Only great courage on the part of the government will accelerate the solution of this question.

Since Germany again is in the news in relation to Egypt, I cannot help but recall Mr. Strauss' statement to me on January 24th:

. . . There was a time when most of the Nazis were here and opponents, abroad. Today it is the opposite. Those who oppose Germany's march towards a free and liberal age are fighting us abroad.

I don't profess to know how much truth there is in Mr. Strauss' evaluation of the present mood in Germany and among Germans abroad. However, something in this area must remain unset. I don't know whether Premier David Ben Gurion's complete trust in the West German regime is motivated by real politik or by a conviction that Bonn is a reliable friend of Israel. Nevertheless, one cannot dismiss completely the reserve and caution of Ben Gurion's opponents. For, when all is said and done, one should remember that international relations are built not on sentiment but on interest.

The Adenauer government certainly was helped from isolation by its deal with Israel in 1952. Whether Germany will remember this only the future can tell.

But there is no question in my mind that the "oldtimers", those around Adenauer who understood the importance of the negotiations with Israel, know it. I am sure Strauss realizes this as well as Adenauer. Though I am not positive about the New German Minister of Defense, Herr Kai-Uwe von Hassel.

Von Hassel, who is fifty-years-old, was born in Africa in what is now Tanganyika, at that time German East Africa. While Strauss stems from the people, von Hassel's father was a typical Prussian army officer who settled as a colonial administrator in German East Africa. Von Hassel, Sr. fought the British during World War I. Then, after the debacle, he returned to Germany, to North Schleswig.

Afterwards the new Defense Minister went back to East Africa where he managed a plantation.

Something is amiss concerning his relations with the Hitlerite fifth column in Africa, although his official biography records two relevant facts: von Hassel came back to Germany in 1940, joined the German army and ended the war as a prisoner of the Allies. He then settled in Schleswig where he eventually became premier of the Land (province).

KAI-UWE v. HASSEL

FRANZ JOSEPH STRAUSS

* * * *

The present German world of politics is extremely complicated and difficult to understand. For example, the newsmagazine, Der Spiegel, which fought Strauss as a reactionary, is less critical of his successor. Those who intimately know both men claim that von Hassel is the opposite of Strauss: he lacks Strauss' human warmth. Also his record as premier of Schleswig-Holstein, as far as the elimination of Nazis from government is concerned, certainly leaves much to be desired. Hassel is a Prussian — a conservative Prussian. He belongs to the pre-war tradition of the German army. He is pedantic and disciplined. As for his political beliefs, Mr. von Hassel himself once stated: "I am a modern German Nationalist."

Von Hassel, who now is directly connected with the NATO forces, as recent as 1960 openly attacked the democratic mayor of Berlin, Willie Brandt for his "Emigrationszeit".

Willie Brandt was a refugee from Hitler; von Hassel served in Hitler's army. Said former Hitler officer von Hassel about refugee-from-Hitler Brandt:

"I confess to being a German and I am ready to share the destiny of the German people and of the Fatherland. This applies to both the good and the bad days. I reject neither my people nor my nation."

It may be pertinent to mention that, under von Hassel's regime in Schleswig-Holstein, many Nazi criminals felt protected and lived well.

Perhaps Strauss was wrong when he told me that all former Nazi leaders are fighting the democratization of Germany from without, from the emigration.

I readily admit that I do not believe the Bundeswehr will continue to remain under von Hassel what it began to represent under Strauss. Probably the former Nazis in Cairo and Argentina now feel closer to Germany than before. At any rate, this point should be closely studied not only in Jerusalem but in North America as well.

I distrust the von Hassels. Still I belong to those who should like to see a different Europe; and Germany is part of Europe.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

SPICY SALMON STEAKS

2 lbs. salmon steaks or other fish steaks, fresh or frozen
½ cup melted fat or oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons anchovy paste
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Dash pepper, paprika

Thaw frozen steaks. Cut into serving-size portions. Combine remaining ingredients except paprika; mix thoroughly. Place fish on a well-greased broiler pan. Brush with sauce. Broil about 3 inches from source of heat for 5 minutes. Turn carefully and brush other side with sauce. Broil 4 to 5 minutes longer, basting once, until fish is lightly browned and flakes easily when tested with a fork. Sprinkle with paprika. Serves 6.

...AND DADDY

By RUTHIE

Somehow, wherever, whenever a daddy is involved, we visualize a maligned caricature of a father who is present only for the "gimmies". Of course, we females know it's all in jest. But one of these days it shan't surprise me at all if poor, persecuted daddy lets out quite a yelp when his toe is stubbed once too often.

There isn't a better daddy in the world than mine and yours and yours and yours. Ask any small fry, and he'll confirm it quite emphatically.

"My daddy can lick yours."

"My daddy is the strongest in the world."

"My daddy is a cop," or a fireman, or a conductor. Which means there's nothing like a uniform.

Let's face it, girls. Daddies are awfully handy to have around the house — at certain times. For instance, if the kids get on your nerves, it won't bother you one bit by saying:

"Go keep your daddy company."

This serves two purposes: you get them off your back diplomatically (psychiatrists can't point a finger at you), daddy welcomes the sudden attention — and the youngsters don't feel rejected.

* * * *

Have you ever listened in on any of daddy's stories? They're gems — absolutely fantastic. Like the one about the small, brown doggie who followed junior to shul one day. The frisky little thing padded right up to the pulpit and refused to leave. So, for clarification, the pup became the "rabbi-doggie". And before long, he was followed by a minyan of doggies.

The elaborations become, literally, out of this world.

My papa also had a classic standard. His was centered on Esther Shpringenbett. I don't know where he concocted the name. But it tickled us kids pink. And for years we never could go to bed without hearing an episode in the life of Esther Shpringenbett.

Some day, when I'm not lazy (when will that be?), I'll turn on the tape recorder during such a session. Will any publisher of children's books have a ball with these improvisations!

* * * *

Then, how about the trip to the movies? Mama isn't such fun to go with. She's constantly nagging you about going to the bathroom — always during the best part of the picture. And she takes sandwiches along. They're nutritious, filling and won't give you cavities like the junk you get at the candy concession. Furthermore, why spend money when there's plenty of food to take from home?

But daddy? Oh boy! Every pocket is loaded before you even get to the movie. He's got peanuts, chewing gum, suckers, pretzels, cookies, sour candy balls, hershies. And is that all? Not on your life! There are several trips to the coke box, suddenly there's a shortage of orangeade, popcorn becomes scarce.

Daddies are so nice to have around.

CHOLENT... • MEMOIRS OF A COMEDIAN •

BY JAN BART

Naturally, such an important dish has given rise to many stories. In this one, three Allied soldiers are in a recently liberated town when the war ends. The grateful townspeople offer to give the soldiers a feast — anything they want — just name the dish.

The Tommy chooses mutton.

The French lad keenly desires crepes suzettes.

The Jewish boy asks for a chulent.

What is a chulent?

The Jewish boy shakes his head, as though to indicate that a detailed description is far beyond him. "It's something," he says, "you put in on Friday and take out on Saturday."

Now I'm an expert chulent eater, but preparation is another matter. The ingredients themselves might not sound so extraordinary, but out of these things came the weekly wonder: potatoes, dried lima beans, plate meat or flanken, schmaltz, onions, maybe a tablespoon of flour, some salt and pepper, and, if available, a small piece of bay leaf and perhaps a touch of ginger.*

It reads like a quick trip in an ambulance, but it tastes like the first meal in heaven.

As delivery boy I made it my business to sample almost every chulent. In no time at all I because an absolute authority on who made the best one in our town. And our own, which I delivered last, often lacked many of its finer ingredients by the time it arrived.

So, Reb Meyer: Who won?

But I suppose I ask the question only because there is still some need in me to forget the pinches of my Cheder teacher. Maybe he didn't 'win.' But who comes out victorious in conflicts of that kind?

Actually, the battle never reached its true climax in my little Polish home town. About that time we began to hear far more often from Poppa in America.

Letters there were, and in his concern for our welfare, frequent packages full of the promise of the Golden Land: cans of sweetened condensed milk, jam, figs and every now and then, at the bottom, some clothing.

"Momma, do the cows really give sweetened milk in America?"

"Jan, in the land of the goldene medinah the milk is sweet."

* A perspective on Jan's gastronomic preference prior to this point, shows his tremendous longing for carbohydrates — starches and sugars, and even greater preference for fats. Whether these foods make for fat people or fat people make a bee-line for these foods, is probably an unanswerable question. Certainly, there are obese people who seem to have a particular talent for turning such foods into fat. However, let the reader — perhaps befuddled by misleading advertising for protein breads as reducing agents — remember that protein foods, such as meat, fish and fowl, have exactly the same caloric value as equivalent amounts of starches and sugars.

Hannah Arendt

Hannah Arendt, author of "The Origins of Totalitarianism" and "Between Past and Future: Six Exercises in Political Thought," was "The New Yorker's star reporter during the Eichmann trial. A distinguished political scientist, Dr. Arendt was not assigned to "spot reporting but commissioned to write a book-length essay of interpretation.

This explains why her 70,000-word "Eichmann in Jerusalem" has been printed only now, in five consecutive issues of the magazine which is said to set the tone for those who "want" to make the smart set.

Although Dr. Arendt was professionally associated with a number of Jewish organizations and scholarly projects, including Youth Aliyah, the Conference on Jewish Relations, and Schocken Book, from 1935 to the early 'fifties, when she won a Guggenheim fellow ship, in recent years she has displayed some coolness toward things Jewish.

Despite some of Dr. Arendt's previous criticisms of Jews and Jewish concerns, however, her "Eichmann in Jerusalem" which is scheduled for early publication in book form, has taken everybody by surprise. Her charge that the Eichmann trial was a farce and an insult to justice and her savage attacks on Prosecutor Gideon Hauser and his witnesses are especially embarrassing to the American Jewish Committee which is casting about for an author of prominence who would be ready to accept the commission to write a "reply".

A native of Hanover, Germany, Miss Arendt is herself a victim of the Nazis, having been interned in the Gours concentration camp. In view of her past experiences, it is strange that she insists on her thesis that Eichmann should have been tried as an enemy of humanity (not of Jews), and that in many contexts she writes with great compassion about him, while impugning the testimony of the survivors who accused him in Jerusalem.

According to some analysts, Dr. Arendt's "New Yorker" articles are a "squaring of accounts" with the American Jewish community which by-passed her and scores of other German Jewish intellectuals who came here in the 'thirties and early 'forties. Others hold that she suffers from "Jewish self-hatred".

Miss Arendt definitely has a "blind spot" when viewing Judaism. For example, in her essay "The Concept of History: Ancient and Modern", she resorts to all sorts of acrobatics in order to prove that "history", as distinct from chronicling, could not and did not arise amongst the Jews. Yet, there is virtual unanimity amongst philosophers of history that the Hebrew Bible first introduced the "historical" perspective.

Dateline: NEW YORK

By Trude Weiss-Rosmarin

Justice Silberg

Justice Moshe Silberg of the Israel Supreme Court filled a large New York University auditorium to capacity on three consecutive Tuesday evenings in March. The theme of his lectures, presented under the auspices of the NYU Institute of Hebrew Studies with a grant of W. Weinberg Foundation, were: "Who is not a Jew?" "Personal Status in Israel", and "Religious and Secular Law in Israel".

Justice Silberg did not comment on Miss Arendt's articles when I broached the subject. He was, however, shocked to learn that Erich Fromm, the psychoanalyst, and Hans Kohn, one of the most active members of the Prague Zionist students' group Bar Kochba, have of late been articulately "anti-Israel".

Both served on the editorial board of the late William Zukerman's "Jewish Newsletter" which, like the American Council for Judaism, was dedicated to the interests of Jewish "religionists", as distinct from "un-American" Israeli nationalists of American citizenship.

With a background of Slobodka and Mir, where he was known as an "iluy" (talmudic prodigy), the German law faculties of Marburg and Frankfurt, and almost 35 years in Palestine, later Israel, Justice Silberg made a powerful impact on his NYU audiences which included many non-Jews from the law school of the university.

DAVID L. ROTENBERG, youthful winner of top mathematics award for 1963. — Case history of a budding genius.

By BERNICE DYMENT

For the second consecutive year our Jewish community has the distinction of numbering among its exceptional young students the winner of the coveted North American Mathematics Award for our region. Last year's winner was Leon Rosen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rosen, who went on a few months later to capture the top prize of them all — Best Student in Ontario Award.

This year's Mathematics winner is 17-year-old David L. Rotenberg, a grade 13 student at Jarvis Collegiate, and son of Mrs. Sam Urbas and the late Dr. Avraham Rotenberg. The impressive statistics of this competition indicate a measure of the stature of young David's achievement — some 7,000 Ontario and Quebec high school and private school students entered the contest this year, representing a total of 315 Ontario and 16 Quebec schools. Sponsored jointly by Actuarial and Mathematical Societies in North America, the test comprises 40 separate questions to be answered in an 80-minute period. This then, as you can see, is a challenge to test the mettle of only the bravest — and brightest!

To satisfy my own curiosity as to whether such outstanding ability is inherited, innate, or the result of persistent hard plugging in a favorable environment, I sought enlightenment from three sources — parent, teacher, and student. Judging from these three interviews, it appears that, in the present case at least, ALL factors mentioned above are present in successful combination. In the interests of those concerned with the "Care and Feeding of a Young Genius", I herewith present my findings.

As to the hereditary factor, David's mother told me that the boy is very much like his father in the matter of scientific and mathematical aptitude. Dr. "Avie" Rotenberg, who died in 1955, was the brilliant son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rotenberg, well-known in Jewish community life. A physicist by profession, and lecturer in this field at McGill University as well as in Los Angeles, Dr. Rotenberg had received his education at the University of Toronto, McGill, and Ohio.

David's mother, the former Jeanette Scholnick of Montreal, is also a graduate of McGill University and the Institute of Child Study at U. of T. She is presently principal of Hillcrest Nursery School and a frequent lecturer and counsellor in parent-child education. With this background, one can readily deduce that a favorable environment was indeed present to permit David's special gifts to flourish and develop.

This, of course, does not mean that there were no problems of adjustment but, as his mother told me, she feels that "the most difficult time for David has passed. Being more mature intellectually than his peers, it was not always easy to find friends in public school. Now that he is older, there is greater acceptance and status in being intellectually capable and advanced." Not long ago, David also participated in a science seminar where the paper he wrote stood very high, and found in that group of young scientists boys of similar interests and talents, whose companionship he values highly.

According to Mr. Fred Chambers, David's mathematics teacher at Jarvis, David has always been a top student in mathematics, as well as in over-all subjects. In grade 9, he covered grade 10 maths as well, and repeated the feat in grade 10 — always staying well ahead of his teacher. He won awards in grades 11, 12, and 13, which Mr. Chambers credits to both "special ability AND hard work", he told me. While excellence in mathematics appears to be the special province of the male student, there are always two or three girls who place in the top 30, Mr. Chambers commented. One reason for this diserepancy, he feels, may be the fact that the girls spend more time on extra-curricular projects. He mentioned the fact that teachers are watching with interest the record of David Rotenberg's younger sister Lorie who is an honor-roll Grade 9 student at Jarvis — and shows real promise of emulating her brother's achievements.

Very tall and slight of build, with brown hair and eyes, David looks very much the serious student, and speaks with the assurance of a young man with a firm command of the English language. He stated very matter-of-factly that he worked hard to achieve top standing in the mathematics contest, going over all the old test papers that were available, but that maths and sciences just happen to come easily to him — he can't explain why. He told me of his Bar Mitzvah at the Ostrovtser Congregation where Mr. and Mrs. Urbas are members. He told me of his stamp collections, his membership in the French, Science, and Mathematics Clubs at Jarvis, and of his summer job in the actuarial department of a large insurance company.

He mentioned with enthusiasm and anticipation the plans for this summer which he will spend in France, staying for a time with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kurtz, in Paris, and later attending classes in a provincial university to polish his French.

David wil be appearing on television on June 2nd, as a participant on the program "Careers" when the special topic will be Physics", as a career.

Next fall David will be entering the University of Toronto. Faculty of Maths, Physics and Chemistry, but he hasn't decided yet just what his ultimate choice of career will be.

Whatever the choice, there is no doubt that David Rotenberg will go on adding laurels to his record of achievement already so promising. Heredity, innate ability, perseverance, an inquiring mind — all the ingredients are there for a brilliant future in a field as boundless as space itself.

HUMAN RELATIONS

Doubts About Love

DR. ROSE N. FRANZBLAU

QUESTION: For the past four months I have been dating a certain young man. We both feel reasonably certain that we love each other. Our problem is that he has three years of college to complete after this one. So far as I am concerned he must definitely finish school.

He has asked me to wait for him since he feels that marriage would be out of the question until he completes school. I hesitate to make such a promise. I love him now, but three years is such a long time to wait and so much could happen between now and then to change our feelings.

I'm afraid that things might not work out for us and in the interim I would be passing up other possible chances to date other available men, as I have done in the last few months.

ANSWER: All people in love have doubts at times about the depth and lasting quality of their emotion.

When the doubts persist for too long, then it points to weakness in the relationship or hurdles in the way, and the young couple should take heed. True love can take care of any normal problems and adjustments that may come after marriage and that are inevitable in any relationship.

For young people who are still growing and developing, four months is not really a long enough period to get to know each other. Not only does each have to become truly acquainted with the other and establish their relationship, but they have to adjust to the changes that are constantly taking place in themselves. The spurts in growth can make an individual appear very different today from what he seemed to be last month.

But the partner may be blamed for the disillusionment, since it was based on an illusion.

Evidently the promise of a future with this young man is not enough to sustain you in the present. Both you and he show some maturity in sticking to your educational plans and not being diverted by any passing fancy. In this respect you both have your feet on the ground. But your apprehension about whether the young man is the right choice for you, and your hesitancy about waiting merit serious consideration.

Although you like him very much, perhaps more than you have ever liked any other man, you are evidently not ready to tie yourself down to anyone.

* * *

There are many ways young people have of breaking up a relationship which both feel, deep down, is not really meant to be. One of the surest ways is to ask too soon for a promise to wait too long.

Sometimes the break-up serves as a test of love. If the pair can really stay away from each other, particularly if other dates appear on the scene, they conclude that they have made the right decision. Actually, the decision to break up precedes any of the methods used to accomplish it.

It would be nice to be able to continue seeing each other on a friendly basis after such loud protestations of love as such couples have made. But this very rarely, if ever, takes place.

It would seem that, under the circumstances, it is you who will have to take the initiative and in a kind and considerate way give him back his freedom to date others again.

Are You An Old-Timer?

Do you remember when a tall-steepled church stood at the northeast corner of Spadina and College (the present "Tip Top" building)?

when the McCaul Street Synagogue was called the "Cossatsky" Shul, after the "Russians" who belonged to it?

when Spadina Avenue, from the Crescent up to Bloor Street, was lined on both sides with grassy, tree-lined strips equipped with hitching posts for horses (up to 1947)?

when a strike at an Elizabeth Street poultry dealer's produced pickets with tri-lingual sandwich boards — in English, Chinese, and Yiddish, as late as the 1930's?

when the centre of gravity of the younger set was the "Eppes Essen" at College and Brunswick?

when the present Famous Dairy restaurant at Spadina and Oxford was another restaurant called "Haimish Winkel" (cozy corner)?

when the JBIT (Jewish Boys In Training) stood on Simcoe Street?

when the popular version of what the initials JBIT stood for differed from the orginal?

when the nothern limit of Jewish habitation in Toronto was Bloor St.?

when Fred Singer was member at Queen's Park for St. Andrew riding?

when Joe Singer was on the Toronto Board of Control?

when the late Rev. Bregman used to preach Christianity on the corners along Spadina Avenue, his long hair flying in the breeze?

when Morris Zeidman also gave Christian sermons in Yiddish at College and Borden St.?

when an atheist preacher would take up his position at Spadina and Queen and harangue his listeners on the evils of religion?

when election campaigns meant outdoor speeches on soap-boxes (including the candidates for the "capitalist parties")?

when there was a Yom Kippur "mushroom" service as far afield as the Templar's Hall on Queen West and Dovercourt to provide for the Jewish retail merchants who had shops and lived in the area (in the early 1920's)?

when the Arbeter Ring (Workmen's Circle) Peretz School was on Beverley Street just up from Baldwin (next to the old home of Globe founder George Brown)?

when the Jewish Family and Child Service was on Beverley Street and Baldwin (southeast corner) on the site of the present Chinese Presbyterian Centre?

when Sir Oliver Mowat lived on D'arcy Street and William Lyon Mackenzie King at 137 Beverley Street? If so, you're really an old timer!

when Edmund Scheuer's jewelry shop was on Yonge Street alongside the Arcade?

when Rabbi Samuel Sachs lived on Palmerston Boulevard, as did many of Toronto's distinguished Jewish and non-Jewish people, including the late Sam McBride, mayor of Toronto?

when the Pride of Israel used to have its mass picnics in Long Branch Park and Alderman Nathan Phillips drew the winning tickets from the hat in the big prize-winning raffle?

when the following were Toronto aldermen: Joe Gordon, John J. Glass, Louis M. Singer?

when Ida Siegel was a trustee on the Toronto Board of Education?

when Judge Tyler presided over the Inquiry into the affairs of the Toronto Kehillah (in 1932)?

when there was a large Punch Cigar billboard on the north west corner of College and Major Streets, which for many years was a landmark of the area?

when the Goblin Restaurant stood on College and Spadina (where the Homestead followed later)?

when there was a Euclid Ave. Talmud Torah (it stood until 1951)?
